Defeated the Austrians Along the Unlester.

London, Aug. 14 .- A great battle is reported to be in progress along the entire front of the German and French

Reports that the expected general conflict has started is contained in news dispatches from Paris. These said that the battle started on Tuesday and that 4000 guns were put into action. Reverberations of the cannon weer heard along the lines for 180

A number of wounded soldiers arrived at Southampton. Though information as to what army they belonged to was withheld, the arrivar might indicate that the British expedition was having a large part of the fighting in by cavalry.

Lord Roberts was appointed commander-in-chief of the oversea dominion forces of Great Britain. These forces include not only the regular British army, but also the troops raised in the colonies.

Meantime, in Belgium, what is declared to be the first considerable battle in the open, the fighting at Liege! being characterized as a siege, occurred on Wednesday, and is designated as the battle of Haelen.

This engagement, with about 12,000 men in action, was fought some thirty miles to the northwest of Liege and teen miles northeast of Louvain, against Austria-Hungary. This chiefa Belgian concentration point.

The battle centered around the town of Haelen, in Belgian Limburg, and extended to Diest, in the province of Brabant, after pasing around Zeelhem. Fighting continued all day, and shells fell around Diest, Germans Pushing Toward Namur. Officially in Brussels it was asserted that 3000 Germans were killed or wounded, while the Belgian losses were "relatively small." A Central News dispatch to London said that, despite the reported re verses to the Germans, they were pushing the main body of their right wing toward Louvain and that fighting was in progress at Louvain, Hasselt Diest and Haelen.

The Belgian war office also announce ed that the Germans, marching on Namur, had been defeated with "heavy osses" as Eghezee, ten mile's north of Namur. Use of machine guns on motor cars was a feature of this en-

Heavy fighting also is reported as occurring at Tirlement, northwest of Liege, on the road to Louvain. Heavy losses of the Belgian cavalry at Tirlement are admitted, but Brus sels says that the Belgian infantry repulsed the Germans.

The Germans showed signs of coniderable activity, after their retreat on the previous day from a force which, coming in the direction of Tongres, had threatened St. Trond.

They took the offensive anew and nade a bold attempt to break through the allied lines at a point which, unortunately for themselves, they be ieved to be weakly held. The Germans flung fully 500 men against a point of the allied defensive line.

The attack completely failed, the Germans being repulsed with great Message Received at Tuckerton, N. J. Says Kaiser's Forces Drove French From Alsace.

Basel, Aug. 14 .- The almost incredible number of wounded at the battle of Muelhausen, in Alsace, have found the hospital facilities inadequate.

Besides the hospitals, schools are filled and churches and hotels have been taken over to house the wounded troops. Special trains have been chartered to convey others to Muel hausen, St. Ludwig and other towns. The German losses are estimated at from 8000 to 10,000. Several German army corps are es-sembled around Metz and extend in the form of a triangle from Metz to Treves and Luxemburg, while a still stronger force is stretched across Belgian Luxemburg and Namur province. The German right flank rests on the Meuse river near Huy. Three army corps with supporting cavalry are established on the left bank. This army threatens to attack Brussels or invade France in the direction of Mons, in the Belgian province of Hainaut. These encounters attest the fact

CHAPTER I-Kathlyn Hare, believing her father, Col. Hare, In peril, has summoned her, leaves her home in California to go to him in Allaha, India, Umballa, pretender to the throne, has imprisoned the colonel, named by the late king as his heir.

CHAPTER II-Arriving in Allaha Kathlyn is informed by Umballa that her father being dead she is to be queen, and must marry him. She refuses and is informed by the priests that no woman can rule unmarried. She is given seven days to think it over.

CHAPTER III-She still refuses and is told that she must undergo two ordeals with wild beasts. If she survives she will be permitted to rule.

CHAPTER IV-John Bruce, an American, saves her life.

CHAPTER V-The elephant which carries her from the scene of her trials runs away, separating her from Bruce and the rest of the party. CHAPTER VI-She takes refuge in a ruined temple, but this haven is the abode of a lion and she is forced to flee from it CHAPTER VII—one mads a retreat in the jungle, only to fall into the hands of grave traders.

CHAPTER VIII—Kathlyn is brought to the public mart in Allaha and sold to Umballa, who, finding her still insub-missive, throws her into the dungeon with her father.

CHAPTER IX-She is rescued by Bruce cued, Umballa, with soldiers, starts in pursuit. Kathlyn is struck by a bullet.

CHAPTER XI-The fugitives are given shelter in the palace of Bala Khan.

CHAPTER XII.

Captured by Brigands.

When Kathlyn returned to the compound it was with the news that she had discovered a group of men, some twelve or fifteen miles to the west They had paused at what appeared to be a well, and with them was the sacred white elephant. Bala Khan was for giving orders at once to set out with his racing camels to catch and crucify every mother's son of them on the cty walls. But Ramabai interposed. "As I came toward the compound I was given a message. The man who gave it to me was gone before I could get a good look at his face. These men who stole the sacred white ele phant are brave and desperate. At the first sign of pursuit they promise to kill the elephant. "And by the beard of the prophet," cried Bala Khan, his face purpling with passion, "these men of the desert keep their promises. And so do I. I promise later to nail each one of them to the walls to die hanging to nails!"

'But just now," said Ramabai quietly, "the main thing is to rescue the elephant, and I have a plan. "Let me hear it."

"From what you told me last night," went on Ramabai, "those nomads or brigands are opium flends."

Bala Khan nodded. "Bruce Sahib here . I will under take to carry them doctored opium. I know something about the drug. I believe that we saw the thieves last evening as we came through the streets. My plan is this: we will take five racing camels, go north and turn, making the well from the west. That will not look like pursuit." "But five camels?" Bala Khan was curious

"Yes. In order to allay the suspicions of the brigands, Kathlyn Memsahib and my wife must accompany us." The colonel objected, but Kathlyn overruled his objections.

"But, Kit, they will recognize us. They will not have forgotten me. They will know that we have come from the town, despite the fact that to all appearances we come from the west."

Bruce also shook his head. "It doesn't look good, Ramabai. Why not we three men?"

"They would be suspicious at once They would reason, if they saw Kathlyn Memsahib and my wife with us that we were harmless. Will you trust

"Anywhere," said the colonel. "But along with the elephant."

"Ah, but the Colonel Sahib forgets the opium." Ramabai laid his hand upon the colonel's arm. "Let them thing they will do will be to search the saddle bags. They will find the opium. In a quarter of an hour they will be as dead and we can return."

"It is a good plan," said Bala Khan, lated to him. "And once the elephant accursed. is back in the compound I'll send a dozen men back for the rogues. Ah! they will play with me; they will steal into my town, overcome my guards. take the apple of my eye! Ramabai, thou are a friend indeed. Haste and Allah fend for thee! Umballa may arrive with an army, but he shall no. enter my gates."

Guided by a servant, Bruce and Ramabai set off for the opium den. The proprietor understood exactly what they desired. There were times when men entered his place who were in need of a long sleep, having money tucked away in their fantastic cummerbunds.

So, mounted upon five swift camels. the party started off on a wide circle. Whether they caught the brigands at the well or on the way to their mountain homes was of no great importance. Ramabai was quite certain that the result would be the same. The colonel grumbled a good deal. Suppose the

"They will smoke," declared Kamabai, confidently. "The old rascal of whom we bought the opium has entertained them more than once. They are too poor to own pipes. Have patience, Colonel Sahib. A good deal depends upon the success of our adventure this morning. If I know anything about Umballa, he will shortly be on the march. Bala Khan has given his word.

Had it not been for liberal use of opium the night before, the brigands would not have tarried so long at the well; but they were terribly thirsty, a bit nerve-shattered and craved for the drug. The chief alone had fully recovered. He cursed and raved at his men, kicked and beat them. What! After all these weeks of waiting, to let sleep stand between them and thousands of rupees? Dogs! Pigs! Did they not recollect that Bala Khan had a way of nailing thieves outside the walls of his city? Well, he for one would not wait. He would mount the sacred elephant and head toward the caves in the hills. Let them who would decorate the walls of Bala Khan. The threat of Bala Khan put life into the eight followers, and they were getting ready to move on when one of them discovered a small caravan approaching from the west.

ing distance the chief of the brigands stepped forward menacingly. The new arrivals were informed they were prisoners, and were bidden to dismount at once.

"But we are on the way to the city of Bala Khan." remonstrated Rama-

"Which you left this morning!" jeered the chief. "Dismount!"

"But I am selling opium there!" "Opium!

"Where is it? Give it to us!" cried one of the brigands.

The chief thought quickly. If his men would smoke they should suffer the penalty of being left at the well to await the arrival of the tender Bala Khan. The white elephant was worth 10,000 rupees. He might not be obliged to share these bags of silver. His men could not complain. They had discharged him. Let them have the pipes.

He himself would only pretend to

But the first whiff of the fumes was too much for his will power. He sucked in the smoke, down to the bottom of his very soul, and suddenly found peace. The superdrug wit

Colonel Hare, suspicious of everything these days, marveled over the simplicity of the trick and the smoothness with which it had been turned. He began to have hope for the future. Bala Khan was joyous. Here was the sacred elephant once more in the compound, and not a piece out of his treasure chest. He was in luck. In the midst of his self-congratulations came the alarming news that a large body of men were seen approaching across the desert from the direction of Allaha. Bala Khan, his chiefs and his guests climbed to the top of the wall and beheld the spectacle in truth. It required but a single look through the binoculars to discover to whom this host belonged.

"Umballa!" said Ramabai. "Ah! Durga Ram, to pay his respects." Bala Khan rubbed his hands together. It had been many moons since he had used a tulwar.

The colonel examined his revolver, coldly. The moment Umballa came within range the colonel intended to shoot. This matter was going to be settled definitely, here and now. So long as Umballa lived, a dread menace hung above Kathlyn's head. So, then. Umballa must die.

Bala Khan was for beginning the warfare at once, but Bruce argued him out of this. Let them first learn what Umballa intended to do. There might be no need of shedding blood.

"You white people must always talk," grumbled the khan, who was a fighting man, born of a race of fight ers yet to bow the head to the yoke. "It is better to kill and talk after ward. I have given my word to protect you, and the word of Bala Khan is as sound as British gold."

"For that," said Bruce, "thanks." "Keep your men from the walls," cried Kathlyn, "and bring me the white elephant. I would deal with this man Umballa." Her request was granted. So when Durga Ram and his soldiers arrived before the closed gates they beheld Kathlyn mounted on the white ele phant, alone. "What wish you here, Durga Ram?"

she called down to the man on the richly caparisoned war elephant. "You! Your father and those who have helped you to escape." "Indeed! Well, come and take us."

"I would speak with Bala Khan," imperiously. "You will deal with me alone," declared Kathlyn. Umballa reached for his rifle, but a loud murmur from his men stayed his impulse." "It is the sacred white elephant, highness. None dare fire at that," his the journey. Bala Khan proved to be captain warned him. "Those with him or upon him are in sanctity."

Tell Bala Khan, 50 said Umballa, controlling his rage as best he could strong ere he took the long journey "tell Bala Khan that I would be his friend, not his enemy."

"Bala Khan," boomed a voice from for your friendship. Whatever the memsahib says is my word. What! Does Allaha want war for the sake of gratifying Durga Ram's spite? Begone, and thank your evil gods that ! am not already at your lying, treacherous throat. Take yourself off, Durga make war on women and old men. The memsahib and her friends are under my pretection."

"I will buy them!" shouted Umballa recollecting the greed of Bala Khan. "My word is not for sale!" came Kathlyn understod by the expression on Umballa's countenance what was taking place. She smiled down at He Breathes Differently From When

"So be it, Bala Khan," snarled Umballa, his rage no longer on the rein "In one month's time I shall return, and of your city there will not be one discovered by means of some tests stone upon another when I leave it!"

"One month!" Ramabai laughed. "Why are you always smiling, Rama-bai?" asked Bruce. "I have had a dream, sahib," answered Ramabai, still smiling. "Unballa will not return here."

"You could tell me more than that. "I could, but will not," the smile giving way to sternness.

"If I only knew what had become of Ahmed," said the colonel, when the fellows, who, ignorant of the nature last of Umballa's soldiers disappeared whence they had come, "I should feel content." "We shall find, or he will find us, if he is alive," said Kathlyn. "Now let us make ready for the last journey. One hundred miles to the west is the Arabian gulf. It is a caravan port, and there will be sailing vessels and steamships." She shook him by the shoulders joyously. "Dad, we are going home, home!"

"Kit, I want to see Winnie!" The word sent a twinge of pain through Bruce's heart. Home! Would he ever have a real one? Was she to go out of his life at last? Kathlyn

"Put you, Ramabai?" said Kathlyn. "I shall return to Allaha, I and Pun dita," replied Ramabai. "It will be death!" objected Bruce and Kathlyn together.

"I think not," and Ramabai permit ted one of his mysterious smiles to "Ramabai!" whispered Pundita, fear

"Yes. After all, why should we wait?"

"1?" "Even so!" "What is all this about?" inquired

"Allaha is weary of Umballa's iron heel, weary of a vacillating Council. And the time has arrived when the two must be abolished. A thousand men await the turn of my hand. And who has a better right to the throne of Allaha than Pundita, my wife?" "Good!" cried Kathlyn, her eyes we have not rendered, the sacrifice

"Kit," interposed the colonel, "we can give Lamabai and Pundita only our good wishes. Our way lies to the west, to the seaport, and home."

And the party returned to the compound rather subdued. This quiet young native banker would go far.

"And if I am ever a queen, will my beautiful memsahib come back some day and visit me?" "That I promise, Pundita, though I have no love for Allaha." "We will go with you to the coast," said Ramabai, "and on our return to Allaha will see what has become of the faithful Ahmed."

"It Will De Death!" Objected Kathlyn and Bruce.

"For that my thanks," responded the colonel. "Ahmed has been with me for many years, and has shared with me many hardships. If he lives, he will be a marked man, so far as Umballa is concerned. Aid him to come to me. The loss of my camp and bungalow is nothing. The fact that we are all alive today is enough for me. But you, Bruce; will it hit you hard?"

Bruce laughed easily. "I am young. Besides, it was a pastime for me, though I went at it in a business way." "I am glad of that. There is noth ing to regret in leaving this part of the world." Yet the colonel sighed.

And Kathlyn heard that sigh, and intuitively understood. The filigree basket of gems. Of such was the minds of men.

But the colonel was taken ill that night, and it was a week before he left his bed, and another before he was considered strong enough to attempt a fine host for he loved men of deeds and this white haired old man was one of the right kidney. He must be over the hot sands to the sea.

m A spy of Umballa's watched and waited to carry the news to his masthe other side of the wall, "cares not ter, the day his master's enemies departed from the haven of Bala Khan's walled city.

When the day came the khan insisted that his guests should use his own camels and servants, and upon Ramabai's return the elephants would be turned over to him for his journey Ram. The people of Bala Khan do not back to Allaha. Thus, one bright morning, the caravan set forth for what was believed to be the last four-

WHEN A MAN LIES.

He Tells the Truth.

When you are telling a lie you breathe differently from when you are telling the truth. The difference was made upon his students by Professor Benussi of Graz.

He prepared cards bearing letters, figures and diagrams and distributed these among his pupils. These were required to describe the cards correctly, except in certain cases when the cards were marked with a red star and the students receiving them were required to describe them falsely. Each student was watched carefully by his of the card, tried to judge from his manner whether he was telling the truth or not. The watchers were unable to judge with any certainty.

But before each man began his test the time occupied in inspiration and expiration was measured, and the measurement was taken again immediately after he finished. It was found that the utterance of a false statement always increased and the utterance of a true statement always diminished. the quotient obtained by dividing the time of inspiration by the time of ex-

Dr. Anton Rose, commenting in Die Umschau on these results remarks that the discovery furnishes a certain criterion between truth and falsehood. For even a clever liar is likely to fail in an attempt to escape detection by breathing irregularly, Professor Bepussi having discovered that men are unable voluntarily to change their respiration so as to affect the result.

Solved the Mystery.

The late Sir Edwin Durning-Lawrence, famous for his theories that Bacon wrote Shakespeare's works, used to tell this story against himself. On one occasion, talking on his favorite subject to an old lady, he impressed on her as final proof the "fact" that Shakespeare could not write his own name, let alone the plays. "Oh, I see!" the old lady said. "I quite agree with you now, Sir Edwin. You mean that he dictated them!"

BUILDING UP THE HERDS.

Community Bull a Good Idea if Handled Right.

From bulletin of Ohio experiment station. In communities where the herds are small and the individual dairyman does not feel that he can afford to purchase a pure bred bull for his own use. it is a good plan for two or more men to own one in partnership. An entire community may own one or more bulls and co-operate in their use. In such cases it will be necessary for the community, or at least the persons cooperating, to select and advance the interests of one breed-that is, bulls of one breed should be used, whether on grade or pure bred cows. This plan would make it possible to shift the bulls from one herd to an

other without the bad effects of breeding the offspring of a bull of one breed to a bull of another breed, and the neessity of disposing of a valuable bull rather than use him on his own pro

Where more than one bull is used at fssociation should be formed and the business conducted by honest, compe tent officers. This association could cover a large territory and handle a large number of bulls. In this way the Etade cattle of a section can be improved rapidly without great cost to any one individual. The association may be confined to pure breds or to grades or it may include both. Such | ganizations are being operated in many states and are meeting the exectations of their members.

NEW VEGETABLE FROM JAPAN.

Experiments With Udo Indicate It Is a Welcome Addition to the Table. Prepared by the United States depart ment of agriculture.]

For persons who like novelty in their food and in their gardens an interest ing field for experiment is offered by the new Japanese vegetable, udo Nurserymen have grown the udo under the name of Aralia cordata for ornamental purposes for twenty years or land situate in Butler Township, Ad more, but as a vegetable it is still comparatively unknown. On rich soil it grows to a height of ten feet or more. producing a very ornamental mass of large green leaves and, in the late summer, long, loose flower lusters sometimes three feet in length. In ap-out-kitchen, frame stable with shed pearance it is much like a larger variety of the spikenard or petty morel, a native of our woodlands.

The blanched shoots of the udo have a characteristic flavor. Properly pre pared they are delicious, or so the author of bulletin 84, just published by the United States department of agriculture under the title of "Experiments FOR table," has found them. The plant re quires little care and with the same space devoted to it yields approximately the same amount of food for the table as asparagus and is ready for use at about the same time in the spring. After the first frost it dies down each autumn to come up again in the spring, much as asparagus and rhubarb do. A patch of it can be forced each spring for at least six years and probably much longer.

Udo growing is not yet sufficiently general in this country for the most nexpensive methods of cultivating to have been worked out, and conditions in America are so different from those in Japan that little benefit can be de rived from the experience of orienta growers. It is, however, reasonable to issume that the cultivation of the ude presents few difficulties. It is adapted to a wide range of climate, as is shown by the fact that it grows all over Jaoan, but no part of Japan suffers from drought. In this country the udo has done best in moist regions, in particuar in New England, the Atlantic states as far south as the Carolinas, in the rainy region of Puget sound and in the tracking sections of California

In the cooking of udo there is still abundant room for innovators. In all experiments, however, one thing must be remembered. When raw the stems contain a resinous substance which gives them a decided and to many per sons unpleasant taste of pine. It is, however, easy to eliminate this by sonking thin slices of the stems in ice cold water for an hour or two or by boiling them in two or three waters, as is often done with strong flavored veg-

CARVAJAL IN FLIGHT FROM MEXICO CITY

Provisional President Seeks American Protection.

Mexico City, Mex., Aug. 14 .- Accompanied by three members of his cabi net, Provisional President Carvajal, who succeeded General Huerta as executive of this turbulent republic, fled to Vera Cruz to take protection under the United States flag.

President Carvajal was accompanied by Jose Maria Lujan, acting minister of gobornation; Eduardo Precial Castillo, acting minister of justice, and Antonio Escandon, acting minister of commerce and labor.

The final action of the cabinet was to adopt a resolution declaring that the provisional government headed by Senor Carvajal was at an end. In the meantime a special train had been ordered and the party of officials left

The departure of the executive left the central government of the republic without a head. So hurriedly were the plans of the flight made and executed that members of the families of some of the refugees were left be-

THE "HITLESS WONDERS."

Qualities That Made the Old White Sex Club Famous.

Back in 1906 the Chicago White Sox were known as the Hitless Wonders. because of their ability to win games with uniformly poor batting, and though Frank Isbell, the best club swinger on the team, finished a season of 132 games with an average of only 279, this club qualified for a chance to fight for a world's championship. And what is still more to the point, they won the great series from Frank Chance's Cubs when that aggregation was at its best. But there was a reason for this, and the reason was the wonderful pitching staff, which consisted of Ed Walsh, Doc White, Nick Altrock, Roy Patterson, Frank Owens and Frank Smith, an aggregation of twirling talent seldom equaled. So clever were the members of this sextet that they were able to limit opposing teams to a minimum of runs, and it was only necessary for the batters of the White Sox to collect three or four tallies to win most contests.

But even if the club was shy on heavy bitters such men as Jiggs Donohue, Lee Tannehill, George Rohe, George Davis, Billy Sullivan, Fielder Jones, Dougherty and Hahn had plenty of speed, knew their "inside play" like a book and in most pinches could be depended upon to come through with enough good plays to score at the right moments.

In every other instance where a team has won a championship in the majors the batters as a whole have been unusually strong and did not have to depend on the pitchers to keep them in the running more than half of the time. Nevertheless a number of clubs have endeavored to emulate the example of the White Sox, but they always have come to grief .- Ed A. Goewey in Leslie's.

LIFE'S SHATTERED PLANS.

"Our day dreams bring long-lost scenes of Back to our view; of friendships not destined to Loves that grew weak 'neath adversity's Painted anew."

Every man and woman make glorious plans for their future when life is in its morning. Young men are full of ambition. They plan first for a business that shall prosper; then comes the thought of a home of their own, and a wife.

The plans of young girls are mostly hazy, taking no definite shape. They look eagerly forward to a happy girlhood and the pleasures which jewel it. Here the timid maiden's plans halt. There are others with further reaching day dreams of a lover who shall one day come from somewhere in this great world to seek them out, and the romance will lead to the pealing of marriage bells. But, alack and alas,

'The best laid plans of mice and men, Gang aft agley."

The young man's ambition leads him into the thick of life's battles, the sport for those who have been born with a silver spoon in their mouths. They grasp every opportunity which he is striving for. And one of these falls in love and marries the girl whom he has set his heart upon. He sits down amid the wreck of his plans, facing life's truth. That which we aim for we seldom accomplish just as we had planned it. It is always the unexpected which happens-
